I see the divorce process as an opportunity for a fresh start. I prefer that my role as a matrimonial lawyer facilitate and help our clients find solutions that work for them. By moving the negotiating process steadily forward, we are normally able to settle everything. When settlement is not possible, we turn to the courts for assistance – always with the goal of efficiently resolving your issues. My approach brings closure faster and enables my clients to move forward sooner rather than later.

My practice includes the usual components of matrimonial law including divorce, child custody and support, property distribution and spousal support – as well as prenups, postnups and cohabitation agreements.
